A Non-Profit Foundation

Improving Youth Baseball

Amateur Baseball Development Group (ABDG) is a non-profit organization founded in the summer of 2004 by Mike Scioscia, Kevin Muno and Randy Riley. The Mission is to raise funds to help local Southern California high school baseball programs, and to organize leagues and teams for boys ages 14-21. All the proceeds of ABDG go to supporting amateur baseball players in Southern California.

ABDG also sponsors The Conejo Oaks, a collegiate team that plays in the California Collegiate League, a very competitive league with top notch college players from around the country. College players get their work in with a 40-50 game schedule during the summer. This league typically gives these players exposure to minor & major league scouts in search of players for the next level of baseball.
